Midway Farm Equipment Expands With A New Steel Building

This 80' x 200' post frame building with 22-foot sidewalls kept one Wilcon crew busy throughout the long, cold winter of 2008. Midway Farm Equipment is a thriving business in the small rural Minnesota town of Mountain Lake. Owner Jerry Haberman came up with a cost-effective building design that would meet the needs of his business for years to come. The fully insulated and heated interior of the building is built out as shop space for equipment maintenance and repair.

Bradley Freitag

Wilcon Team customers have benefited from Brad's construction skills and leadership abilities for the past 15 years. Brad is accomplished at all types of concrete and masonry work, but he's best known for his fine quality carpentry skills. Because of his broad range of construction experience, he is an able job superintendent as well. Brad, his wife, Tami, and their children live in Mountain Lake, Minnesota.

Bill Says...

As I write this, Wilcon is looking forward to a busy and productive summer construction season. The office staff, along with an excellent team of masons, carpenters and subcontractors, is working hard to meet your building needs.

During the winter and spring we attended several green building seminars, conferences and workshops to improve the way we build. These training opportunities focused on sustainable building practices, energy efficiency and healthy indoor air quality. High performance homes and buildings incorporating this technology will provide greater comfort and lower utility costs to the people who live and work in them. Please give us a call and let us know how we can put these new and cost-effective techniques to work for you.
