Project Spotlight

West Bend-Mallard Community School

West Bend, Iowa

Students enrolled in the award-winning school system in West Bend, Iowa, started out the new school year with several renovated classrooms, a repainted gymnasium and a new state-of-the-art science lab, thanks to the work of Wilcon and its building team partners.

West Bend is a small community of less than 1,000 in northwestern Iowa. Its school system was awarded a 2008 bronze medal in U.S. News and World Report's Best High Schools in America. The award is based on the principle that an outstanding high school must serve all its students well, not just those bound for college.

The West Bend community demonstrated its commitment to its youth by investing in a number of significant health and safety upgrades to its school building, which was originally built in 1926. Besides the completely renovated science lab, the project included new ceilings, walls and flooring in several classrooms. Most of the old carpeting was replaced with natural linoleum, a long-lasting, completely recyclable flooring product that ensures a healthy indoor air environment for the students.

For Jill Henderson, Wilcon's project manager on the job, the project was especially rewarding—she's an alumna of West Bend High School. Allers Associates Architects of Fort Dodge, Iowa, provided the design services.

Phase II of the project will be completed this summer.
