Success: The Place Where Preparation Meets Opportunity

Summer is synonymous with construction activity in the state of Minnesota. This season demands the very best of our talents, time and energy. During the winter and early spring, much time is spent preparing Wilcon staff and crews with training in safety, building trade skills and construction management.

Project managers Jill Henderson and Todd Tetzloff, along with Nick, Bill and Kirsten Freitag, picked up valuable knowledge at the Jack Miller Network meeting in Florida. Other team members gained skills to improve project systems during leadership and management training at several excellent seminars and workshops.

Safety Day 2007 took place on March 30th. Wilcon crews spent an entire day focusing on construction safety reviews and updates. Sessions on back safety, scaffolding competencies, fall protection guidelines, forklift training and basic construction safety were enthusiastically received. training and CPR certification finished out the day.

Safety awareness and craft training are among the best tools Wilcon can offer to its employees. Clients will reap the benefits of a quality building completed on time to suit their needs! Our company looks forward to a safe and productive construction season.
